

AUTUMN COUNTRY CLASSIC OF DRESSAGE

Autumn Country Classic of Dressage is a competition that is just a little bit different. Held at the end of the dressage competition season, this show is aimed at those riders who want to have some fun while they compete. The atmosphere is low key and encouraging. Many riders choose this show to move up a level without the stress that one usually sees at Dressage shows. Some riders choose Autumn Classic as their first EC or PARC show. This show has been held annually for over 10 years by the virtually same show committee. 2005's move to Cloverdale worked well for management and competitors alike and 2007 will be held there as well, bringing back the popular Team Competition. The Silent Auction is always popular as are the numerous awards, prizes, volunteer and competitor draws. Free coffee in the office is almost always available, show volunteers are happy to answer questions or help competitors. Autumn Classic is a great example of a Dressage competition that caters to the Grass Roots and the Grand Prix at the same time, while creating an environment of good will and sportsmanship. Autumn Country Classic is an excellent choice for Competition of the Year, as voted for by the people who competed at this show.
